A second-half comeback, spurred by a Jackie Carmichael double-double, bounced the ISU men's basketball team ahead of Oakland for a 79-75 win in the SEARS BracketBusters game at Redbird Arena Saturday night.

ISU's sixth-straight win at home also marks head coach Tim Jankovich's 100th victory with the Redbirds, only the second coach in school history to accomplish triple-digits.

"The best part of it for me was when I got in the locker room, the players all celebrated [the 100 wins], and for me that really meant a lot," Jankovich said. "The truth is, I've won zero, so many players we've had fun coaching in the four-plus years we've been here, and everybody in the organization contributes to that."

The 'Birds (17-11) only led the Golden Grizzlies (15-14) for four minutes and 19 seconds, but with three players in double-digit scoring, ISU was able to overcome the 34-point performance from OU's Reggie Hamilton, the nation's leading scorer.

"This was a fantastic game," Jankovich said. "Facing one of the leading scoring teams, the leading scorer in the nation, and one of the best shooter in the nation, they displayed all that."

With 1:04 left in the second half, the Redbirds rallied back from a 6-0 Oakland run, with free throws from Carmichael to bring the ISU advantage to 75-73.

Oakland tied the game at 75-75 after a goaltending call on John Wilkins with 46 seconds remaining. But with 17 seconds on the game clock, Carmichael hit a go-ahead lay-up to steal the lead, 77-75.
